Every school on the northern beaches has been independently assessed to find out its academic ranking.

The study undertaken by the Better Education Group marks schools out of 100 and then ranks them on performance.

The analysis is based on results in English and maths as well as the overall academic performance.

Below are a list of schools that have achieved a mark of 90 or more out of 100 and where they are ranked in NSW.

Fourteen high schools on the beaches achieved a score of 90 or more and 45 primary schools. All are listed below.

The Better Education website is run independently and describes its aim as providing “informative and comparative school results, including school rankings or ratings and lists of best performing schools, to parents wanting to make choices about schooling for their children”.

The peninsula’s top high school is the selective Northern Beaches Secondary College Manly Campus in Freshwater which is sixth in NSW. It was given a state overall score of 100/100 by the group.

St Luke’s Grammar School in Dee Why, was second on the northern beaches and ranked 57 in NSW. It received a state overall mark of 97/100.

While the German International School Sydney, in Terrey Hills, was third on the beaches and 66th in NSW, with a state overall score of 97/100.

Northern Beaches Secondary College Balgowlah Boys Campus was the highest non-selective public school to rank on the beaches, coming in fifth. It ranked 88th in NSW and its overall state score was 96/100.

Geoff Lancaster of St Luke's Grammar School put the school's success down to "engaged students and positive teachers".

"We set the benchmark high and the students rise to it," he said.

"They generally meet those high standards, they are lovely students."

Deputy Principal Horst Giesler of the German International School Sydney, said he believes his school performs well because of the focus on languages and science.

Unlike popular belief, 70 to 80 per cent of students are locals, rather than expats.

"You don't need any prior German to come to this school, at whatever age," Mr Giesler said.

"A lot of locals come to our school because in their families they have some European DNA.

"They like that we concentrate on languages, not just German, but our students also speak French or Spanish.

The school also offers the International Baccalaureate Diploma, which Mr Giesler believes attracts students that are above average.

Paul Sheather, Principal of Balgowlah Boys, a public, non-selective school, said his school had been identified within the Department of Health as being brilliant at teaching boys.

“We have a wonderful team of teachers that really work hard and we have established a successful pedagogy of teaching boys in particular,” he said.

He said students are told clearly what they need to achieve at the start of each lesson, spend the class learning what is required and then are tested at the end.

He said in 10 years the number of pupils have jumped from 400 to 1200, as the school has become more popular, but it has managed to retain its excellent academic standards.

Meanwhile, the top primary school on the peninsula is the John Colet School in Belrose. It came sixth in NSW and a state overall mark of 100/100.

Second was the Sydney Japanese International School, in Terrey Hills, coming in 35th in NSW and given a state overall score of 99/100.

And, third was Balgowlah Heights Public School, Balgowlah, NSW, 2093, which was ranked 94th in NSW and was given a state overall score of 98/100.

John Colet School Principal Julian Wilcock said the academic success was all down to the staff.

“Teaching is not about the buildings, it’s about having great teachers,” he said.

“They stay with the children for a number of years, three years during infants. That promotes stability.

“We also have a really challenging arts program.

“We teach Sanskrit and Latin and Shakespeare and philosophy.

“We also run a mindfulness program which sees children pause 10 t 15 times a day which helps them to keep calm and focus.”
